*The h-index quantifies both the scientific productivity and the scientific impact of a scientist. Specifically, h = 50 means that 50 of my publications have been cited at least 50 times. In this way, the h-index reflects both the number of my publications and the number of citations per publication. The i100- and i10-indices refer to the number of my publications with at least 100 and 10 citations, respectively. These statistics were calculated in August 2019 using Google Scholar Citations.
